EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Background:

Indian Medicinal and Aromatic Plants species (MAPs) are playing key role in producing different kinds of medicines & their supplements under health systems in Ayurveda, Homoeopathy, Unani, Siddha, Rigpa and folk medicine systems. With the rapid and consistent growth of herbal-based health care system the world over there is increased demand of herbs. The review of demand and supply status of MAPs in India has pointed out towards continuous opacity in the herbal trade especially related to supply chain and chain of custody of MAPs. Research and development in MAPs have lead to new frontiers in Dietary Supplements, Culinary Herbs, Flavor & Fragrances, Aroma therapy and Natural Dyes etc. Shift in interest on use of MAPs in fields allied to medicine has opened newer markets for MAPs.

With the ever increasing interest in MAPs throughout the world there is corresponding growth in their trade. Development of newer areas such as food supplements, nutraceuticals, cosmaceuticals and search for newer lead molecules for medicine and meat substitutes from vegetable sources is putting these sources to stress. In world trade of MAPs, India and China are two MAPs producing and exporting countries.

Indian herbal trade involves 8600 odd domestic herbal industrial units, thousands of practitioners of Indian Systems of Medicine and other related activities. There is a demand of nearly 5 lakh MT/annuum of the herbal drug raw material. The structure of this trade is very complex. This trade involves thousands of collectors, traders and commission agents, primary cultivators of MAPs and end users. The report on demand and supply of MAPs (2015) enlists 1622 botanicals corresponding to 1178 species in commercial trade with a total trade volume of 512000 MT for the year 2014-15. The trade is still secretive and complete chain of custody (cultivators, collectors, traders and consumers) at many places is not transparent. Under such conditions it is not easy to estimate the trade data which is crucial to the fair trade and conservation of MAPs threatened as a result of increase in demand. The present survey is the one of step in this direction. The availability of this type of data will be central to future planning about herbals.

In order to obtain a reliable data on trade of MAPs, the chain of custody of MAPs, is very important, because the data and dynamics of trade will be generated from these stakeholders only. There is thus a need of a directory of trader, exporters and extractors who form the back bone of this activity. This work is being carried out at the different levels but no concerted effort was made previously, hence this project.

Many of the MAPs are collected from the wild and forest. Earlier the data about collection from the forest was maintained by the forest department. But due to change in policy this work was allotted to the Panchayats. Unfortunately, no Panchayat took the effort to maintain this data and this information is no longer available. Rawal Medherbs Consultants LLP is an organization active in this area and has an essential infrastructure available with it and carried out this project.
